اختبار الفصل الثالث

When we think of philanthropists in today's society, perhaps the first names that come to mind are Warren Buffet and Bill Gates. But according to a recent study carried out by the women's philanthropy Institute of India at the university of India. Women are as much as 40% more charitable than men.

Women at nearly every income [salary] level are better givers. Not only they often give more, but they also tend to donate more frequently.'charity doesn't concern males only', says Dr Debra Mesch, the director of the Institute.'we are seeing women really growing in terms of philanthropy'.The study ,entitled 'Women Give 2020', is the first to look at philanthropy by gender.

The gender giving –gap varied by type of charity. The survey showed that women were less likely than men to give money to help arts and culture organisations.In contrast, they were 55% more likely donors to international causes than men, 42% more likely to help religious organizations, 32% more likely to offer aids to associations interested in youth and family purposes as explained by the director of a social organization aiming to pull children out of poverty in America that 60% of its donors are women .'Ultimately ,our cause and what we do is about children and poverty, and very naturally ,women gravitate toward those issues more and better than men do' Hanlon says.

Finally, the director of the American Institute proved throughout this study that women are in fact more compassionate and charitable than men.
