Text:

A Journey to the Past

Lalla Yamina, an old Algerian woman from Constantine, sat next to her granddaughter telling her about how lifestyle used to be in the past. She said: "Back then, we lived in difficult conditions; we didn't have gas, electricity and technology, but our life was simple. People had small houses made of mud bricks, and the rooms were not as many as now. They used to wear formal and traditional clothes like El Hayek and Kechabia, and women cooked a variety of homemade delicious dishes such as the famous Couscous and all the food was healthy.

Children in the past, liked playing in groups, games like hopscotch and hide and seek, but they didn't have much time for it. So, girls sometimes used to help their mothers in the house chores at a very young age, while the boys raised animals in the farms."

At the end, the grandmother told her granddaughter that she lived a happy life and had the most precious memories of all times.
